I've always loved the watercolor illustrations that are featured in Daily Candy's email's and website, so the other day I Googled them and discovered that they're done by an artist named Sujean Rim.

Sujean started out as a footwear and accessories designer after graduating from the Parsons School of Design, but found that she just kept drawing and drawing. She eventually compiled all her artwork and dropped it off to a bunch of Art Directors, ultimately being commissioned to do many pieces by a variety of companies. Daily Candy, Juicy Couture, and Nordstrom are a few of her current clients, but there are many more (which can be found on her personal website above). Here's some pieces of her work that I just love:

I love the colors used and the pattern/shape of the dress!

I love how simple this is.

This might be one of my absolute faves! I love the colors and the burst of pattern used, as well as her sunglasses.

I love the squiggly lines used to form the dress, and how it's black and white. Sometimes that's all you need!

Anything pertaining to a magazine and I'm all about it!

I love the details on her boots and her sunglasses/the look in her eye.

I love the mix of gray and colbalt blue here. Not to mention her glam style!

I love pink anything, but what really got me was the attention to detail on her stilettos!

And this one just makes me want to go play at the beach and enjoy a sunset!

After I get off work today, I plan on being outside as much as possible. Reading, soaking up the rays.. ya know, things that are seldom available in Seattle, even though it's technically SUMMER.

Stay tuned for Girl Power Hour pictures from last night's Argosy Cruise!

//xo til next time.
